FRANKLIN LAKE HOME BLENDS
TUSCAN DESIGN WITH ARCHITECTURAL CHARM

The couple had a grand plan to move to the lake or dream to build a home on a lake. In 2003, Cameron Wischer came home one day, already planning to build a home on a lake. "I was excited to see the lake," he says. "It was beautiful, but I was also inspired. How was the lake? Cameron's response was simple: "It's beautiful."

The couple had a grand plan to build the home when the Wischers first visited the area. Cameron's wife, Julie, was the driving force behind the home. "I had always dreamed of living on a lake," she says. "I was inspired to see the lake. Cameron's response was simple: "It's beautiful."

Grand, arched wooden timbers beckon the eyes outdoors. Cherry shelving features an arched limestone gas fireplace, and a distressed oak floor lends nostalgic warmth to their living room.

Open shelving and a built-in cherry cabinet in pale butter with light antique Mendocino and vintage design elements. Overhead beams and decorative beams above the island add interest to this kitchen space.

The Wischer's master bath features interesting architectural tray ceilings in gold and bronze tones, brown and cream granite countertops over cream cabinets, a Kohler jetted soaking tub, and Travertine tile. Two lighted, recessed glass shelves and a brushed gold chandelier and hardware lend a bit of sparkle to the space.

A dramatic brick archway ceiling and entryway blends Old World charm with Tuscan design in Cameron's favorite, the wine cellar. Custom-built shelving in curved walls creates a spectacular vintage look. An oil-rubbed bronze door and lantern candle chandelier complement a stone floor.
